Speak now, or forever hold your peace...

Things aren't going the way Hel wants them to, but maybe he should accept some of the blame. Seeing his mate on the altar about to marry the alpha of a local wolf pack is bound to spur anyone to extreme measures. He's stood by for ten years while his inability to address his own emotions has paralyzed any progress with her. They might be best friends, but until he can learn to use his words, that's all they'll be.

Megyn Wekkle wasn't an idiot. She knew there was tension between her and the broad-shouldered hunk she called her best friend. Someone else made a move when he wasn't willing though, and now she's consigned the "what-if's" between her and Hel to the dustbin of her memory. What she never expected was that he would finally find his voice at the most inopportune time. Even worse, she can't help but wonder if maybe he wasn't the only one having a hard time confronting their feelings...

Hel's actions have pissed off the entire wolf pack, and also the local dragon enclave representative. They need to get out, and get out fast. Hel may have caused the problems, but they've grown to envelop her as well. The longer they spend together, the more things between them begin to unravel, and a decade's worth of thoughts and feelings come to the surface. Can they ride that turbulent wave to a new beginning together, or will the deeds of the past tear them apart?
